7. US Embassy Moscow comments on possible Soviet expansionist moves in Iran:

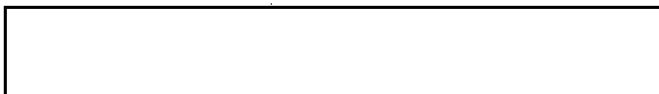

In reporting heaving Soviet propaganda emphasis on US "involvement" in Premier Razmara's assassination and on alleged US efforts to supplant UK domination in Iran, the US

Embassy in Moscow points out that the USSR, by thus blaming all disturbances that may occur in Iran on the US, could be paving the way for an even more vigorous policy toward Iran. The Embassy suggests that such a policy might involve invoking the 1921 Iranian-USSR treaty and intervening militarily in Iran in order to "defend" that country from foreign domination. As to the possibility that the USSR will achieve its goal of playing a paramount role in Iran without invoking military measures -- and thus without risking a major war -- the Embassy notes how welcome to the USSR is the movement to nationalize the Iranian oil industry. In the Embassy's opinion, the USSR will increase its pressure on Iran at the present critical juncture.

Comment: The USSR is reportedly conducting spring maneuvers on the Iranian border, and several references to the 1921 treaty have been noted in Communist propaganda. While these undoubtedly will be utilized by the USSR as part of its war of nerves against Iran, there is no evidence that the USSR is contemplating military action at this time.

Present Soviet press attention to developments on the oil question, and earlier reports of possible Soviet preparations (at the USSR-Iranian trade and financial talks) for reopening the issue of oil concessions, suggest that the USSR may now renew its efforts to gain a measure of control over Iranian oil fields.

10. Austria acting to reduce Communist police strength:

Austrian Interior Minister Helmer has assured US High Commissioner Donnelly that the Austrian Government will take immediate steps to remove Communists from the police forces, beginning with the discharge of 400 members of the Vienna administrative police. Helmer said that other purge operations would be conducted more slowly because of Soviet opposition and the absence of legislation enabling the government to dismiss police officers on the grounds of pro-Communist sentiments. Helmer added that he has sent a reliable police officer to Graz (second to Vienna in Communist infiltration) to eliminate those responsible for Communist success there. Donnelly comments that the USSR will strongly resist any measures calculated to reduce Communist representation on the police force and that these developments may bring a "tightening of the general situation" in Austria.

Comment: The surprisingly strong pro-Communist vote in the recent Vienna police union elections prompted a US-UK survey of Austrian police, which revealed that Communist strength in the police organization is much greater than responsible Austrian officials has previously indicated. Since then, the US High Commissioner has pressed the Austrian Minister of Interior for remedial action. ✓
